BENCHMARK INDEX

This section explains the benchmark index used to compare the scheme's performance. It shows the part of the market the scheme is expected to invest in and the companies that broadly make up that market segment. The index return provides a simple reference for seeing how the scheme has performed against a relevant market measure. It also explains whether dividends are included in index returns and how the weight of each company is decided. The index is reviewed from time to time as companies and market values change. This helps readers understand the reference used for the scheme's performance comparison. The benchmark does not indicate or guarantee the scheme's future returns.

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

This section explains the primary objective of the fund and the investment outcomes it seeks to achieve over the long term. It outlines the fund's stated mandate, including its focus on capital appreciation, income generation or a combination of both, while describing the broad asset classes and investment opportunities it may pursue. The section also highlights the fund's intended investment horizon, return expectations and overall purpose within the context of its category. By clearly defining the scheme's objective, it helps investors understand the fund's long-term direction, aligns expectations with its investment mandate and provides the foundation for evaluating whether the fund is suitable for their financial goals, investment preferences and overall portfolio requirements. It also identifies the broad investment limits within which the fund manager builds and monitors the portfolio. The objective is read alongside the scheme's benchmark, investment restrictions and relevant risk disclosures. This provides a clear starting point for reviewing the fund's strategy, portfolio characteristics and historical performance.

INVESTMENT STRATEGY

This section explains how the mutual fund seeks to achieve its stated investment objective by outlining the strategy adopted for managing the portfolio. It describes the fund's approach to identifying investment opportunities, selecting securities, constructing the portfolio and maintaining diversification across market segments where appropriate. It also highlights the investment principles that guide decision-making, including the evaluation of business fundamentals, growth potential, valuation and risk considerations. In addition, it explains how the fund manager manages portfolio allocation, responds to changing market conditions and maintains alignment with the scheme's investment mandate. By providing an overview of the investment framework, the section helps investors understand the methodology behind portfolio decisions and the approach used to pursue long-term capital appreciation in line with the fund's stated investment philosophy and objectives. It remains relevant across different phases of the market cycle and changing investment conditions.

INVESTOR SUITABILITY

This section identifies the type of investor for whom the fund may be most appropriate by evaluating its investment objective, strategy, portfolio characteristics and overall risk-return profile. It explains the investment goals, financial objectives and level of risk generally aligned with the scheme, helping investors understand whether the fund is suitable for their individual circumstances. It considers market-cap exposure, diversification, expected volatility and the nature of the underlying investments to provide a balanced view across investor profiles. The section also highlights the investment horizon and portfolio role the scheme may serve, helping investors assess how it complements an existing portfolio. By bringing these factors together, it supports a clearer assessment of whether the fund aligns with financial goals, investment preferences and the ability to withstand market fluctuations. It also gives context for matching the fund with an investor's broader allocation plan, investment discipline, return expectations and holding capacity over time.

Profile Assessment

This section provides an overall assessment of the scheme by first considering its benchmark context, followed by its stated objective, investment approach and investor suitability. It highlights how these elements shape the scheme's role within a diversified portfolio and the investment horizon for which it may be relevant.
